

Reading Homework

Reading: Students should read for at least 10 minutes two times weekly. Of course, reading additional days is always beneficial. Books may be read out loud or independently and be picture books, chapter books, books from a home/school/public library, or any other book your child enjoys.

In addition, a small paper book, on or close to your child's reading level, and a short quiz that goes with it are sent home through your child's blue Daily folder most weeks. The paper books and quizzes are optional and can be used as additional resources for your child to complete their reading homework. These paper books may be kept at home for future reading. Quizzes completed and returned will receive a sticker.

Pasta House: I also participate in the "Reading, Writing, Ravioli" reading program sponsored by Pasta House. This is a reading incentive program that runs through several months of the school year. It allows your child to receive a monthly certificate for one free child's ravioli dinner (or dinner of comparable value) and drink at any participating Pasta House restaurant. The books and reading activities we complete in class will allow your child to earn this monthly certificate.

Happy Reading!!!
